

Ginoogaming Studies for Community Planning

There are significant economic development opportunities in and around the Ginoogaming First Nation (GFN) ranging from mining, pipelines, forestry and energy transmission. The Nation has already taken action to develop protocols and processes to participate in these developments and take full advantage of the opportunities that they offer while at the same time minimize the potential negative aspects.

As part of the preparation the Nation has decided to conduct:

The Nation has arranged the studies to build on each other and assist in the creation of a comprehensive community plan. The Community Needs Assessment and Social Impact Assessment studies run until May 2015, while the Economic Strategic Plan will continue until October 2015.

As part of the community engagement process for these studies the Ginoogaming First Nation is hosting an Open House for all First Nation members (on and off reserve). The Open House will be an opportunity to see what the studies has been achieved so far and help prioritize the way forward, and will be fun. We will have a feast, BINGO, door prizes draws, as well as videos, slide shows, and interactive stations where community members can make their opinions known.

This is a chance for the community to say where it wants to go! Because,

“if you don’t where you’re going, any road will get you there!”

For more information on what the sessions involve and what to expect, or how you can assist please contact Erin Symington-Armstrong at the GFN Training Centre call 807-876-2242